

Week Ahead

Stronger than expected earnings pushed the market higher last week along with hopes of a BREXIT deal and breakthroughs in trade. This week all eyes will be on earnings once again as some of the world's largest companies are set to report. These include Amazon, McDonalds, Microsoft, Intel and many more. It seemed coming into October, the markets were preparing for a terrible slate of earnings as analysts continued to downgrade outlooks but if that doesn't turn out to be the case, we would expect the market to move materially higher into the end of the year barring major news in the political arena.
